30th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Matthew 22:34-40

In today's Gospel Jesus tells us to love God and neighbor. These two commandments are the foundation of Christian Spirituality and permeate the writings of St. Francis de Sales:

To show us more vividly how ardent God's desire is for our love, God demands that love from us in wonderful terms: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all of your mind. This is the first and greatest commandment." We often think that God is so great and we are so little that we are incapable of loving God. So as not to be discouraged and turn away from God's love, we are told that we are highly capable of loving God with all our strength, even after sin.

To love God above all else means we need to place God above all our idols, for our heart runs after many material things and spiritual consolations. As soon as we have obtained them, it seems that we have to do it all over again. Nothing can ever satisfy our heart. God wills that our heart not find a place of permanent rest in our idols. Then our heart is free to return to God from whom it comes. Bees can only rest upon flowers in bloom. So it is with our heart. Our heart finds rest solely in God's love. Why then do we detain our heart's desire for God's love, and pursue other loves.

The Commandment to love God is higher than the Commandment to love the neighbor. But our nature offers greater resistance to the love of neighbor. Yet, when we trust in our Savior's love, we can be more courageous in loving the image of God that is frequently veiled from us in our neighbor. We come to recognize the resemblance of the Creator in each other. For, the pure love of God is to love what is of God in all creatures. Let us then imitate Jesus, who taught us more through His works than His words, how to love our God with all our heart, soul, and mind, and our neighbor as we do our own self.

PASTOR'S COLUMN

One of the greatest differences between Catholics and our Protestant brothers and sisters is our understanding of salvation. I don't mean that we understand heaven differently. Rather I'm talking about how we get there. This is a fundamental difference between us. One of the key themes of the Protestant Reformation is, salvation by faith alone. In other words we are saved by our belief in Jesus and absolutely nothing else. How we live our lives has no bearing on our salvation. Now this is a bit of an oversimplification of their position. Most protestants would argue that if you truly believe then your life will reflect your belief, but they absolutely reject the idea that our works have any bearing on our salvation. There are scripture passages that support this belief in isolation. Ephesians 2:8-9 for example, "For by grace you have been saved through faith, and this is not from you; it is the gift of God; it is not from works, so no one may boast." Or John 3:18, "Whoever believes in him will not be condemned, but whoever does not believe has already been condemned, because he has not believed in the name of the only Son of God." However, when we look at the greater whole we see passages that contradict this idea. For example Matthew 25, when the sheep are separated from the goats. It is not the lack of faith that condemns the goats, rather they recognize Jesus as Lord. It is their failure to act out their faith that leads to their condemnation. Or even in the next verse of John's Gospel, John 3:19, "And this is the verdict, that the light came into the world, but people preferred darkness to light, because their works were evil." Their works are evil and that is why they reject Jesus.

Protestants hold fast to this; belief is salvation by grace through faith alone because as they see it the alternative is that we earn our way to heaven. This is what they accuse Catholics of believing, that our salvation is earned by our good deeds. That we discount the role of grace and the sacrifice of Christ on the cross for a sense that we can be good enough to get to heaven. This is not what we as Catholics actually believe. Being a "good person" will never be enough to get us to heaven. In fact this position, that protestants say we as Catholics believe, is explicitly rejected. The belief that we can earn our way to heaven was the belief of a man named Pelagius, and his teachings were declared to be heresy at the Council of Ephesus in 431.

So if we as Catholics reject the protestant view that salvation is independent of works and we reject the Pelagian view that Salvation is solely through works, then what do we believe? Stay tuned until next week for that answer. Yours, in Christ, Fr. Daniel Dillard
